NOTE FROM: The Founder

Minority Mental Health is the first of a two-part series. Typically, when people think of minorities they default to race and ethnicity, but minority groups are very diverse as they encompass much more than that. Individuals may be defined or categorized by age, education, socioeconomic status, geography, sexual orientation, gender identity, spirituality and faith, health beliefs and practices, linguistics, culture, military service, ability, and more. Even within groups, individuals have their own identities; and so it is vital that one does not generalize or make assumptions about any group.

With respect to this, it is important for mental health professionals (MHPs) to know that individuals are an amalgamation of identities belonging to multiple groups. Understanding and knowing which identities are the most important to an individual is key to connecting and providing treatment appropriate for that person. MHPs do not have to know all about a particular group, but they should ask their clients questions to learn about them and what matters to them. Additionally, MHPs should know their limitations. If they are unable to serve a particular individual or group for any reason, it is incumbent on them to make a referral to someone who is capable. Providing or connecting people to the right MHP is key to closing the gaps on inequitable mental health care outcomes between and among groups.

July is National Minority Health Awareness Month. The purpose of this observation is to bring awareness to the unique struggles that diverse minorities face regarding mental illness in the United States. Although we observe this month, we need to take time daily to reflect upon how we treat others who are different from ourselves, not only professionally but personally. No matter who we are, we all want to be heard and treated with respect.

Thank you, gracias, salamat, to all our contributors and advertisers for this issue. We truly appreciate your support. To our readers, we hope you discover something new. On a final note, I would like to take this opportunity to appeal for more funding. Without your much needed support, we will not be able to continue providing this free resource.

SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS OF Mental Health Issues

Mental Health issues do not look the same in everyone.<sup>1</sup> Many people experience different symptoms, especially in minority groups. The levels of severity, duration, and combination of symptoms also tend to differ in people due to age, gender, race, and/or other circumstances. Some general signs and symptoms of mental health issues are illustrated below. A red flag is when someone has at least any five symptoms persisting daily for at least two weeks, especially having a low/sad mood or losing interest in almost all activities.<sup>1</sup> Note that differences in cultural belief systems and experiences influence how various communities might view these signs and symptoms (for example, hearing voices may be acceptable for some).<sup>1</sup>

Mental Health In Minority Groups: Therapy Seeking Behaviors

BY MARQUEZ WILSON* | PsyD

As mental health becomes more accessible across the United States, more persons of color (POC) have decided to take the plunge into trying therapy. While the rate has increased over the years, there is still a large gap between how often POCs and Whites choose to access therapy. According to the McLean Hospital, “25% of Black people seek mental health treatment when needed, compared to 40% of white people.”<sup>1</sup> Meanwhile, for Hispanic/Latino/a populations, Murray and Henry (2022) reported that non-Hispanic White youth were 12-15% more likely than non-White youth to receive treatment for major depression; and for minority youth who experience suicidal ideation, the gap for mental health access was even larger at 18%.<sup>2</sup> This serves to indicate that while access has improved, utilization still appears to be low among POCs.

It appears there are two major reasons for these gaps: (1) lack of clinicians of color in the field, and (2) lack of culturally appropriate treatment approaches. In this short article, I look at both reasons and posit potential solutions.

Lack of Clinicians of Color

According to Zippia, which is an online recruitment site which aggregates statistics about specific professions, 72.6% of therapists are White and 75.6% of therapists identify as women.<sup>3</sup> The American Psychological Association (APA) used census data to discover that in 2019, 83% of psychologists in the United States identified as White.<sup>4</sup> However, they were also able to comment that between 2000 and 2019, the number of psychologists who identify as POCs increased by 116%. This both demonstrates that progress is being done and just how low the numbers of POCs in the field was in 2000. A blog post written by Abby Kirchmeier for Ayana Therapy out of Los Angeles<sup>5</sup> points to one of the reasons for the dearth of therapists of color. She comments on the lack of exposure to the field, stating: “Just as minorities do not use psychology services because they do not know it exists, or choose not to adopt it because of stigma, individuals may not choose to work in the psychology field due to their own misconceptions or cultural stigma,” highlighting a circular problem. Since POCs are less likely to engage with mental health, they are less likely to have experiences with mental health providers, and as such, are less likely to think of becoming a mental health provider as a viable career option.

Additionally, it must be considered that for many POCs who interact with mental health providers at a young age, the experiences are not positive. Frequently, the interaction is from being referred either for behavioral intervention or assessment.<sup>6</sup> It is important to consider the circular nature of this problem as it shines light on the idea that the system must be adjusted from the ground, from the roots, in order to be effective in breaking the current status quo. I would like to offer the need for the introduction of mental health as a positive and voluntary concept to children from a very young age. This is to allow them time to become comfortable and ask questions. In addition to not pursuing this field due to misconceptions or lack of positive experiences, the high cost, not only of the education, but of the licensure process must be critically examined for other potential barriers for POCs who do wish to enter the mental health field.

Lack of Culturally Appropriate Treatment Approaches

The lack of culturally appropriate treatment approaches also serves as a barrier to access. It must be noted most therapeutic approaches were not normed on or originally considered for POCs. Trends have been changing in more recent times as psychological assessments are re-normed to include more diverse populations. For example, the Minnesota Multiphasic Personality Inventory (MMPI) underwent re-norming as part of the release of the third edition of the personality assessment. The University of Minnesota Press released a statement concerning the release, reporting their priorities included, “focus on enrollment of people/persons of color or communities of color . . . toward the goal of increasing generalization of results and improving assessment of diverse individuals and/or groups.”<sup>7</sup> While this is an example for psychological assessment, the overall premise holds for therapeutic support, in order to address patterns of historic disenfranchisement and to work towards the re-norming of the psychological practice to apply to all racial groups equitably, there must be intentional investment. Largely, the focus has been on adapting already existing approaches and techniques, as shown above. However, we can also consider reaching for the knowledge held by communities of color and creating specific approaches from our own unique understandings of the world. An example is Cuento Therapy, or the use of storytelling from a Latino/a/x perspective in therapy. This was first mentioned by Constantino (1986)<sup>8</sup> as an approach for engaging Puerto Rican children and has recently seen a resurgence in literature and research by Latino/a/x clinicians and researchers. This is a clear example of the use of a technique from a culture, to be applied to the culture, and demonstrates to be highly effective.<sup>9</sup> Many authors have done the work to highlight therapeutic approaches, techniques, and skills to work towards more culturally sensitive practice, so I will encourage those interested to seek out that literature.

In closing, I issue the challenge to consider in your circles how you can advocate for greater investment in POC related research, better visibility, and the easing of barriers for POC entry to these fields.

Tobacco use is the leading cause of preventable death and disease nationwide and in Nevada. Over $1 billion is spent in Nevada alone on annual healthcare costs caused by smoking. By encouraging tobacco cessation, behavioral health and substance use treatment facilities can reduce the toll of tobacco on our community's health.

Behavioral health and substance abuse treatment facilities are encouraged to:

- ADOPT a comprehensive tobacco-free campus policy
- ASK about tobacco use at every patient visit
- ADVISE patients to quit tobacco
- ASSIST patients by offering medications to aid in quitting and refer them to the Nevada Tobacco Quitline at 1-800-QUIT-NOW (1-800-784-8669)

Mental Health Treatment Is Not The Same For People Of Different Cultural Backgrounds

BY STEFANIE NAKADILOK-HUI* I.M.S., M.A., PH.D. CANDIDATE, LADC

As a person of color and addictions counselor in Southern Nevada for a little over a decade, I have had my share of stories in dealing with dilemmas due to cultural differences. I have been contacted by insurance companies to do single case agreements because they cannot find any counselors who spoke Thai, Vietnamese, Mandarin, or Tagalog. My counseling agency was one of the few that had mental health therapists and substance use counselors that were mostly bilingual in various languages. Many clients sought out a provider that could speak and listen to them in a language which they are most comfortable expressing themselves. Additionally, many potential clients who were seeking therapy and counseling also contacted me simply based on my profile picture on Psychology Today. "You look Asian, so you probably understand us better." Parents sought counseling for their kids because they thought their kids did not understand them or their traditions, especially in families in which the kids are first generation-Americans. Clients entered treatment only to appease family and friends, but felt more comfortable with someone who looked like them or spoke a language that they mutually shared.

Nonetheless, looking and speaking alike are not the only traits that assist to make things easier for providers and clients with unique cultural backgrounds. There is less access to mental health care for minorities or persons of color<sup>1</sup>, including unequal access to resources and services, and this worsened during the COVID-19 pandemic<sup>2</sup>. When persons of color have to seek mental health care with providers who do not have similar cultural or ethnic backgrounds, here are some tips that can assist in creating a positive therapeutic relationship.

- 1. Don't be afraid to directly ask about the client's cultural background. Sometimes providers are afraid to ask about specific traditions or behaviors that are common with a group of people, either because they do not want the session to be awkward, offend the client, or simply demonstrate that they are not knowledgeable about something. However, simply, but respectfully, just asking people about their traditions or their ways will not only show interest in understanding the client's cultural background but also provides opportunity for discussion and building rapport.
- 2. Be mindful that what works for you does not work for others, especially with different cultural backgrounds. Sometimes, we are trained and educated that certain coping skills or interventions are most favorable for situations; however, these interventions may not always be favorable for those with different cultural backgrounds and may even cause more strain. For example, we may encourage a client to directly communicate concerns to their family member – find a time to sit down, directly look at the person they are speaking to, and use assertive speech. However, in some Asian cultures, especially if the family member is an "elder," like a parent or older adult, being so direct or even making eye contact may come off as disrespectful towards their elders. This may result in increased conflict and retaliation. Instead, ask clients what is favorable in their culture and traditions when it comes to communication or interacting with others. Help them find their comfort, their "healthy" and "positive" as they define it rather than as we define it.
- 3. Don't be afraid to use an interpreter, if needed. I speak Thai fluently. Even though I can communicate and understand a client who speaks Thai, I will still find myself conversing in "Thai-glish". That's when I mix a little Thai and a little English- combination between Thai and English – because there were terms in English that I could not properly translate in Thai and even some descriptions in Thai that didn't really exist in English. Additionally, I was not trained or educated in Thai so there are clinical or therapeutic terminology that I am not familiar with even though I speak the language fluently. I have many colleagues who speak Spanish fluently and provide counseling in Spanish, but still request tutoring in Spanish just to better provide therapeutic interventions properly in correct Spanish terms. This is admirable!
- 4. Seek advice or provide a referral when necessary. Consult a supervisor or colleague if things become difficult or if you feel something does not feel right when interacting with your client. There are also resource centers with information regarding a specific cultural background. I am sure this issue of the Mental Health Spectrum provides an abundance of resources, such as the Asian Community Resource Center (ACRC) or Asian Community Development Council (ACDC), here in Las Vegas. Lastly, don't be afraid to provide a referral to another provider, if necessary. We may not be able to fully help a client if the language or cultural barriers hinder us from doing so even if we try.

- 5. Notice your own implicit biases. Sometimes we do not recognize our own biases against others, especially of specific cultures or people of specific backgrounds. Take an implicit bias test or ask a colleague or mentor to evaluate your own internal biases before engaging in counseling or therapy with clients of different backgrounds.
- 6. Have fun with it! Sometimes I encourage clients to show me pictures or videos of cultural traditions, family parties, holiday activities, etc. I have had clients bring in props, snacks, games, and other items that they identify with. I have even watched soap operas and movies in different languages to relate to something a client mentioned or found influential to them. Providing therapy or counseling to someone with a different cultural and ethnic background does not have to be stressful or tedious. It can actually be pretty interesting, and you may be able to take this knowledge and help other clients as well!

WE NEED YOUR HELP!

MENTAL HEALTH SPECTRUM™ (MHS) IS IN CRITICAL NEED OF YOUR FINANCIAL SUPPORT TO CONTINUE OUR EFFORTS IN PROVIDING MHS FOR FREE.

Launched in March 2021, MHS has been actively trying to facilitate free access to a wide array of mental health resources in a timely manner in order to help make a difference. But we are seriously in danger of shutting down due to lack of funding. That's why we are reaching out to you! We are seeking support at any level, from a personal donation to corporate sponsorships that can help with printing and staffing costs.

According to the State of Mental Health in America's annual report, Nevada has ranked 51st overall for the past three years. This ranking indicates a higher prevalence of mental illness and lower rates of access to care.

The purpose of Mental Health Spectrum™ is to serve as a one-stop free resource tool for mental health issues and help make a difference to improve all matters concerning mental health. Please join us in this endeavor so that we can make a difference together. We rely solely on donations, advertising and sponsorships. Any support shall be greatly appreciated. Please go online to support us at mentalhealthspectrum.com to see the optional ways to make a donation.

*We hope we can count on your help to keep MHS going.
Thank you in advance for your support.*

Cultural Diversity In Minority Mental Health Care

BY ANJUM KHAN | MA, PMP, PMI-ACP

Mental health can affect anyone, regardless of race, age, gender, religion, or socio-economic status. There are certain demographic groups, however, that experience mental health issues more disproportionately than others. According to the CDC, "health disparities are preventable differences in the burden of disease, injury, violence, or in opportunities to achieve optimal health that are experienced by socially disadvantaged populations."<sup>1</sup>

What is cultural diversity?

Cultural diversity is about the various aspects of cultural and demographic differences that "... contribute to a person's view of themselves."<sup>2</sup> Demographic characteristics include age, race, religion, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, income, education, and marital status. Cultural aspects include shared values, knowledge, language, norms and belief systems, and social habits or patterns (behaviors, cuisine). All these combined may impact and/or influence the emotional, social, and psychological well-being of a person.<sup>1,2</sup>

What is culturally competent care?

Mental health professionals (MHPs) often have to work with clients who are not from the same culture as their own. The implications for mental health care is that more often than not, inadvertent inequitable and unsustainable care is sought (and provided) because of cultural diversity.<sup>2</sup> Cultural diversity's impact on mental health ranges from the ways that people view health and illness to treatment seeking behaviors and approach, the nature of the therapeutic/treatment relationship with their MHP, and issues of stigma, racism and discrimination.<sup>2</sup> Thus, health care and services need to build in a fundamental understanding of the role of cultural diversity in health care seeking behaviors and treatment options and outcomes. One must be comfortable with one's therapist in order for the therapeutic relationship to have positive outcomes; and being able to "click" with one's MHP is an essential component of the therapy. For tips on how to find a culturally competent MHP, go to the NAMI article "Finding Mental Health Care that Fits Your Cultural Background."

What are some barriers to care for minority populations?

Although individual reasons may vary for why or why not mental health care is sought and received, there are three broad categories of barriers affecting minority groups: Access to Care: insurance barriers (uninsured, underinsured); financial barriers (affordability); physical access (proximity to services); Stigma, Mistrust, and Cultural Attitudes: social stigma, religious affiliation and spirituality, systemic racism; and Finding Appropriate Therapists: Lack of diversity and cultural sensitivity; microaggressive comments or actions; overdiagnosis.<sup>3</sup>

Generally, people of color receive mental health services at lower rates than white Americans. Amongst the various racial groups, Blacks and Hispanics are more likely than Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders to seek and receive care; while Native Americans are the least likely to seek and receive any care.<sup>3</sup> This shows a significant disparity amongst minority groups themselves. It also indicates that individuals from these minority groups experience different situations/circumstances that impact their mental health and care. Therefore, it is essential for MHPs to understand that there is an underlying component of cultural diversity when dealing with patients from minority groups. More so, it is also important to understand that different populations comprise different demographic characteristics, and go through different experiences, which influences how they perceive and react to situations. As such, mental health care for minority groups must evolve to encompass an inclusive approach where an understanding of intersectional identities and diverse cultures enables a healthy and constructive connectivity between MHPs and clients to achieve optimal mental health outcomes.

Showing compassion and empathy not just to self but also to others can help build a sense of connection that can make a big difference in someone's life.

PSYCHOLOGY TODAY BLACK AND AFRICAN AMERICAN THERAPISTS

Extensive directory of Black and African American Therapists searchable by city, zip or name. The Psychology Today profile provides the therapist name, photo (when available), phone number, type of credentials, location, website (if available) email contact form, specialties, finances, and an about description of the provider.

OUTPATIENT LISTING

The following pages contain a directory listing of non-profit and for-profit outpatient providers serving Las Vegas and the surrounding areas. Providers are listed alphabetically. Listing information includes the provider name, website, contact telephone number, zip code (which gives the general area where the provider's physical location/office is), and focus/specialty. For providers that do not have a focus/specialty listed, this information may not have been available at the time. In general, many providers cover a wide range of mental health services and issues.

You are encouraged to call or check the providers website for additional information, such as services provided, payment methods, and/or insurances accepted, etc. Please note: not all outpatient providers are listed. Some providers may have opted out of being listed, others may not have been aware of this listing or their information may have changed after this directory was published. This list is being provided to consumers in an effort to assist in finding the right mental health professional. Below is the legend for the focus/specialty.

Q&A WITH JOSE MELENDREZ*

MSW, CHAIR OF THE NEVADA MINORITY HEALTH AND EQUITY COALITION

Mental Health Spectrum (MHS): What would you like the community to know about the Nevada Minority Health And Equity Coalition (NMHEC)?

Jose Melendrez (JM): I would like the community to know that we are committed to everything Health Equity. The pandemic brought to light the incredible inequities that have existed and that populations who identify with some type of Diversity continue to be impacted and hurt. The NMHEC is committed to ending that. Our mission is: “to promote the health and well-being of diverse communities by pursuing research, capacity building, and advocacy that recognizes the unique cultural and linguistic differences of Nevadans.”

MHS: What are the benefits of agencies/organizations joining NMHEC as partners?

JM: By far, the opportunity to network and connect on multiple levels that include policy, advocacy, professional development, social justice, education, respect, access, and equality. All of these are critical elements in the work of coalition building. At our core we value and work towards full inclusion ensuring all have a seat at the table.

MHS: Describe and address the top two minority mental health issues or challenges facing Nevada?

JM: Well as a Coalition this is very difficult to say or choose. Every issue in mental health is critical. If I had to choose, it would be more of a personal choice, including working with youth and those dealing with suicide. Youth in Nevada, like many across the world, faced great disruption and loss of what is a critical time for their development. School, friendships, social development, mental development, loss of life, and so many things changed for them. This loss is something they will live with for the rest of their lives. The other area from my lens has been the impact from suicide. So much loss and anxiety at this time. So many not having the resources or the capacity to deal with their feelings has really taken a toll on our community. It seems that no age group was spared from this issue. More among communities of color. Much of our work in the past 2 years has dealt with the fall out of the pandemic that includes outreach and awareness to prevent suicide. We still have a lot of work to do in this area especially when you place a cultural lens on that area.

MHS: What kind of legislative policies may facilitate improving mental health conditions for black, indigenous, people of color (BIPOC)?

JM: There are some very specific areas in policy work that stand out. First is the requirement for service providers to undergo cultural competence training. This is perhaps some of the most critical legislation passed in Nevada in my team here. This requirement is currently being reviewed and discussed to improve the process for Nevada. This is critical work if we are to support the diverse populations in Nevada. The NMHEC is currently engaged in these conversations, and we will do all that we can to move these efforts forward.

Another area in policy is the use of Community Health Workers in Nevada. Elected officials are reviewing legislation and how CHW's can be utilized in Nevada. This is a critical element in serving diverse communities. I have seen the success of CHW's in Michigan, California, and yes, even in Nevada with key members of the Coalition utilizing CHW's in their work and with great impact. This will be a critical component of the workforce in Nevada.

MHS: How could the community address stigma among black, indigenous, people of color (BIPOC) communities?

JM: Simple - Everyone must be willing to educate and raise their level of awareness. Then we begin work among all communities. We must each as individuals accept our responsibility and our place in this work. The first step is acknowledging our own biases and then moving towards our personal education. Through education we will be empowered to become part of the solution and not continue to feed the problem. I know this is not easy and we have so much work to do but this is a commitment from NMHEC to bring health equity to all of Nevada.

*Jose is the Executive Director at UNLV School of Public Health Office of Community Partnership and serves as the staff Chair of NMHEC. He also is the liaison for UNLV to the Nevada System of Higher Education and Minority Serving Institution task force that includes MSI-Title III Asian American, Native American, Pacific Islander Serving Institutions and Title V- Hispanic Serving Institution initiatives. Jose is also a UNLV instructor in Social Work and Public Health. His professional experience includes training in diversity, equity, and multicultural programming, coalition building, and community based participatory research.

PROTECTIVE FACTORS FOR BLACK, INDIGENOUS, PEOPLE OF COLOR (BIPOC) COMMUNITIES BY MHS STAFF WRITERS

“Protective factors can build resilience and...are critical to ensuring positive outcomes...”<sup>1</sup> Mental health stressors can be triggered or exacerbated by the lack of certain protective factors, e.g., isolation can be increased by lack of connectedness.<sup>1</sup> It is important to know that factors are neither exclusive to, nor universal within, a community. However, there are specific protective factors that are significant to non-white racial and ethnic groups, as shown next.

As a result of AB 327 and the legislative changes to NRS641C.450 all licensees and interns are required to complete 1 hour of Diversity/Cultural Competency training every year. This is required for any renewal after January 1, 2023.

See CASAT for available Cultural Competency Trainings.

SHARED EXPERIENCES

"It is O.K. to not be O.K., and it is O.K. to talk about it." – NAOMI OSAKA

THE MENTAL HEALTH CHALLENGES THAT MANY INDIVIDUALS EXPERIENCE AT SOME POINT IN THEIR LIVES IMPACTS THEIR LIFE JOURNEY IN VARIOUS WAYS. OFTENTIMES, PEOPLE ATTEST THAT SHARING PERSONAL STORIES HELPED THEIR HEALING PROCESS, OR BY READING SOMEONE ELSE'S, THEY GAINED HOPE THAT THERE IS A PATHWAY TOWARDS HEALING. SHARING STORIES ALSO HELPS BREAK MENTAL HEALTH STIGMA AND ENCOURAGES OTHERS TO DO THE SAME.

Seeking Therapy (An Asian Immigrant Woman's Story)

Counseling, therapy, and mental health services have become more widely accepted in the past decade. Nonetheless, some people may not be familiar with mental health services, especially those in cultures where therapy and mental health counseling is not widely accessible or understood the same.

An insurance company referred a client to me because the client, Lina*, could not find a provider in her network who spoke her native language, Thai. Apparently, I was the only one that took her call personally after asking my receptionist if she could speak with me directly. She was seeking counseling because she recently lost her husband of over 30 years. Her adult daughter, who lived out of state, recommended that she seek counseling because she began having unhealthy thoughts and would cry for days. After explaining that she was mainly calling because her daughter begged her to, Lina says to me in Thai, "I don't even know what I'm doing. What IS therapy?"

I asked Lina to come in for an appointment so that I could explain the process to her in person. Lina had never received any type of mental health counseling or therapy before. She kept referring to me as "doctor" even though I kept explaining to her that I was not a doctor but assured her that I do have a graduate degree and many years of training to get my license. In the initial session, I prompted her to speak about how she was feeling and what she felt she needed help with – her challenges, her concerns, etc. She would ask questions such as, "Do I just keep talking?" or "Do you think there is something wrong with me?" and "Can you fix me?" Lastly, she would ask me, "Can you call my daughter and tell her how I'm doing?"

Throughout our sessions, I realized that I had to explain each step of "what therapy is" and how the process works – from how to fill out the paperwork and consents to why I had to ask specific questions to gather information for the intake and assessment. We spoke "Thai-glish" most of the time – a combination between Thai and English – because there were terms in English that I could not properly translate in Thai and even some descriptions in Thai that didn't really exist in English. However, it was the mutual understanding of exactly THIS that allowed us to be successful together.

Lina and I continued a therapeutic rapport for almost two years. Our one-hour sessions included interventions beyond talk therapy. There were sessions spent pulling up resources in Thai so she could read and understand her symptoms in her native language. At times, Lina would bring in documents or notices that she received in the mail and asked me to help make sense of them. Sometimes doing so would help her declutter the overwhelm that filled her life. The interaction that I had with Lina may not be traditional therapy, but the interventions were presented in a way that helped Lina feel supported rather than judged, alone, or confused. I understood her culture. I spoke her language. I also helped bridge the difference between her daughter's generation of first-generation Asian American and Lina's upbringing from a different culture. Lina decided to move to California to be closer to her daughter after finally being able to let go of the things that she was attached to – she no longer felt like leaving Las Vegas meant leaving her late husband.

Minority Mental Health And...

RACE

Asian American and Pacific Islanders (AAPI)

- A diverse group with Chinese, Japanese, Filipino, Vietnamese, Korean, Hawaiian, South Asian (all Indian sub-continent), and/or other Asian and Pacific Islander origins.<sup>1</sup>
- Have the lowest rates for seeking help and least likely to receive mental health treatment due to stigma and lack of culturally relevant and integrated care.<sup>1</sup>
- Mental illness is considered a weakness or sign of poor parenting, and shameful to everyone; thus tend to restrain in expressing negative feelings to maintain self-esteem and interpersonal harmony; and often report somatic or physical manifestations instead of psychological symptoms.<sup>1</sup>
- Second-generation AAPI immigrants are bilingual (with English often becoming the first language), and often face a cultural identity dilemma due to struggles to balance familial ties and traditional cultural values with the pressure to assimilate to mainstream American society.

Black/African Americans

- The experience of being black in America varies greatly (depending on socio-economic status, location, family history of poverty or racism, etc.).<sup>1</sup>
- Are more likely than white adults to report persistent symptoms of emotional distress (e.g., feeling sad or low, struggling to make an effort).<sup>1</sup>
- Adults living below the poverty line are at least twice more likely to report serious psychological distress than those with stronger financial security.<sup>1</sup>
- Males tend to talk less or avoid seeking professional support, increasing risk for mental illness or suicide.<sup>2,3</sup>

Hispanic/Latinx

- A diverse group from Central and South America, but with some shared cultural factors that connect individuals, including being bilingual (with the majority speaking Spanish as a first language).<sup>1</sup>
- Rely on family as a primary system of support and need to feel connected (often expect healthcare providers to include family members in any therapeutic process).<sup>1</sup>
- Stigma prevents them from seeking treatment as talking about mental health is often taboo, and there is fear of being labeled as “locos” (crazy) or bringing shame on the family.<sup>1</sup> So often prefer to seek help from general health care providers rather than MHPs.<sup>1</sup>

Indigenous/Native

- Have lived in the U.S. for centuries prior to colonization by European settlers (a fact often ignored). Continue to face discrimination and lack of support, causing on-going multi-generational trauma.<sup>1,4</sup>
- A diverse group with 574 federally recognized tribal nations (many tribes are still unrecognized officially) and over 200 indigenous languages. Some shared culture includes: close attachment to land and nature; connectedness with past and community; following and fostering meaningful traditions;<sup>4</sup> have strong family bonds and rely heavily on extended family support systems.<sup>1</sup>
- Endure many burdens like economic and political marginalization, educational disparities, discrimination and mental health challenges rooted in a long history of trauma.<sup>1</sup>
- Are disproportionately affected by suicide: have highest rates compared to general population resulting in a local epidemic of suicide.<sup>1,4</sup> Women showed the largest increase in suicide rates since 1999 (higher risk due to more violence, trauma, poverty, and limited access to mental health care).<sup>1,4</sup> Risk factors: history of interpersonal violence/abuse; unemployment; unwillingness to seek help; alcohol abuse; perceived discrimination; isolation on reservations/feeling cut off from others.<sup>1,4</sup>

OTHER FACTORS/GROUPS

Disability

- Some categories include: physical or mobility-related disabilities; cognitive, developmental or intellectual disabilities; and sensory disabilities (blindness or deafness).<sup>1,2</sup>
- Struggle with physical (immobility and pain) and social (isolation, exclusion, or discrimination) aspects.<sup>1</sup>
- Have increased risk of mental illness due the challenges and barriers like: accessible and effective mental health care; dehumanizing stigmas (ableism); lack of integrated care; and communication.<sup>1,2</sup>

Education

- Low educational level is a significant factor amongst minority groups for increased odds of psychiatric issues and health care disparities as it correlates with poor socioeconomic circumstances (e.g., accessing care, ability to communicate in English for immigrants, affordability of health insurance, etc.).<sup>3,5</sup>

Historical/Familial Trauma

- Traumatic experiences by specific cultural, racial/ethnic group (or family) in history or recent past (e.g., Holocaust, savagely violent colonization of Native Americans, slavery, parent death by violent attack) can result in a cumulative, lingering (often indirect) impact across subsequent generations—and often results in a damaged (cultural) identity that affects their mental health.<sup>6</sup> For example, younger generations can exhibit signs/symptoms such as depression, fixation on original direct trauma on ancestors/parents, low self-esteem, anger, and self-destructive behavior as a result of historical or familial trauma/adversity.<sup>6</sup>

Religion

- Many cultures tend to rely on religious coping methods or spiritual connections for mental health issues.<sup>1,2,3</sup>

Sexual Orientation/LGBT+

- Also experience higher rates of mental disorders, suicidal ideation, nonsuicidal self-injury, & substance use.<sup>5</sup>
- Stressors (e.g., discrimination, stigma, harassment) are directly associated with suicidal behavior and indirectly with risk factors for suicide.<sup>7</sup>
- Suicide risk: highest during the teens and early 20s. Youth (15-24) attempt suicide more frequently than straight peers.<sup>7</sup> Protective factors for youth (ages 15-24) that can make a difference: family acceptance, connection to friends and others who care about them, sense of safety, and access to care.<sup>7</sup>

Veterans

- Have higher than average rates of suicide than civilians; 67% of deaths by suicide are by using firearms.<sup>8</sup>
- May possess service-related risk factors (e.g., injury, recent transition from military services to civilian life).<sup>8</sup>
- Are more likely to experience at least one traumatic event; 1 to 3 combat veterans suffer from PTSD.<sup>8</sup>

RECOMMENDATIONS AND OPPORTUNITIES

- Promote connectedness. A key protective factor across all minority groups is getting support from family, peers, community, faith, and socially.<sup>1,3,5</sup>
- Promote safe reporting, suicide prevention programs & messaging to help reduce stigma/contagion effect. Stigma is a barrier to care in many cultures. Suicide is often preventable.<sup>1,3,4,5</sup>
- Educate & train MHPs in cultural humility: MHPs should be aware of and know how to relate to people from diverse backgrounds, as well as recognize unique needs for those with disabilities and underserved populations.<sup>1,2,3,5</sup>
- Ask questions or learn about a person's culture, family, history, beliefs. Individuals have multiple identities as they belong to many groups and have varying experiences. As a clinician, it is impossible to know all things about every culture or minority group. The best way to know what matters to a person, is to ask.
- Expand & increase accessibility to mental health services for diverse minority groups to match needs: Minorities from diverse populations experience various situations that can impact their mental health, e.g., financial hardships, fear of discrimination and stigma. Mental health services must meet such various needs.

THE MISSION: "Arms of Support" (a free Survivors of Suicide Attempt Support Group) created by Tuff Services Ministries, offers suicide attempt survivors a safe, non-judgmental place to talk about their common experience of having survived a suicide attempt. Members are encouraged to share their stories of recovery to support each other and learn new ways to cope with suicidal thoughts. Through peer support, trained and certified guided facilitation, we seek to encourage a supportive community to foster the development of effective coping skills and create hope for the future.

Group Schedule: Meets every two weeks, Wednesday's from 6:00pm to 7:30pm

Group Facility Location: THE CARE COALITION, 1919 S. Jones Blvd, Suite #A, LV NV 89146

HOPI TRIBE

A MATTER OF WORDS

“Being able to feel safe with other people is probably the single most important aspect of mental health; safe connections are fundamental to meaningful and satisfying lives.” – Bessel A. van der Kolk (Writer & Psychologist)

Much of the stigmatization attached to mental health problems is due to the negative connotations in the words and language being used when dealing with this topic. In each MHS issue, we will highlight certain word definitions, quotes and excerpts that show how, in a matter of words, it is possible to make a positive impact—and help make a difference.

OUR CULTURE, BELIEFS, SEXUAL IDENTITY, VALUES, RACE AND LANGUAGE ALL AFFECT HOW WE PERCEIVE AND EXPERIENCE MENTAL HEALTH CONDITIONS. IN FACT, CULTURAL DIFFERENCES CAN INFLUENCE WHAT TREATMENTS, COPING MECHANISMS AND SUPPORT WORK FOR US. IT IS THEREFORE ESSENTIAL FOR CULTURE AND IDENTITY TO BE A PART OF THE CONVERSATION AS WE DISCUSS BOTH MENTAL HEALTH AND MENTAL HEALTH CARE.
