CPS Budget Problems

By Dr. R. Pletsch

During this time of trying to balance the budget it seems like someone doesn't want it balanced. We continue to fund the TIF program that takes millions from schools, police, streets and san and everything else paid by property taxes. Do a computer search, it will amaze you. While they are borrow-ing money to pay CPS bills, the TIF has sur-plus. Thankfully some Aldermen are publicly starting to question this. The city is paying high bond rates while having money that could save millions in interest.

The Board continues to increase the pay to law firms. The Sun-Times on August 9th had an article on this that you would find interesting. This week's budget hear-ings brought out the fact that the budget includes $338 million for building projects. This with a deficit. I know some might be used for the water problem in the schools, but it seems like a family that has another child and needs room so they want to build an addition, but they refuse to pay their current rent. As unrealistic as these budget facts seem, the kids once again are losing. There are numerous educational studies that say the best way to help a student is to lower class size.

There are none that say increasing class size and dropping teacher numbers helps the children. The more you talk with personnel in our communities, you realize that many teachers have left by their own choice because of the worry of job security, some expect further cuts on the 20th day and/or at the whim of the Board. In our region eleven principals have left. This is the experience that can't be

The Board claims many of the most recent 500 pink-slipped will be rehired. But talk to a principal and you realize that unless they know the particular teacher being let go, this is unlikely. Principals are trying to stretch their budgets. Why hire somemaking about one $85,000 a year when you can fill the position at about $50,000 a year? It makes sense and later in the year you can use that extra money for things like books, and toilet paper. Once again, the pressure of taking care of their families by the teachers and parents worrying if the school year will be interrupted with a strike, hangs over
