

Energy Market Landscape in CA and neighboring areas, and how it's affecting the Cement Industry

Bill Jerald

Director of Energy and Sustainability, CalPortland

Summerlin, NV

wjerald@calportland.com

Abstract - The California energy market is a very unique market that is pressured by the California policy requirements of reducing greenhouse gas emissions, limiting natural gas pipeline supplies, increasing renewable energy and battery storage systems, and managing the carbon free nuclear power plant at Diablo Canyon. This presentation will focus on what's going on in this energy market, what its impacts are upon the neighboring States out in the Western US, how these impacts might change moving forward, and how that is affecting the cement industry.